Only four legged friends

Modern pet doors are very safe

20.07.2021

Dogs and cats have family status and are usually more pampered than the human members of a household. They have their own spot on the sofa, are showered with pampering, and enjoy many special rights. Hence, for many pet owners, this also means that their furry friends can decide at any time whether they prefer to stay in or go out. A pet door is the ideal solution for this, but what about the security aspect ?

Regular cat flaps are not safe

Many homeowners have concerns about installing a flap that is so large for their dog to go through. These concerns are justified, because simple flaps do not prevent burglars from breaking in. Therefore, when choosing a suitable model, ensure that the petdoor can be locked and the material can withstand any attempts to break in through physical violence and the additional use of specific tools. The petwalk petdoor meets all those criteria and goes even further. All the door models from the Austrian manufacturer are WK2 Tested. They have built in alarm system, and lock automatically, so when closed they offer the same kind of security as modern security doors.

A feeling of security

Once you choose a model, you can start with the assembly process which can easily be done by yourself with a little manual skill, all you need is a socket within two meters. At petwalk.at you can find all the necessary and the required installation instructions; for example how to install in a masonry door or a glass door. It is also possible to connect the petdoor to the house alarm system. The sophisticated security measure also includes an optional contact free access control system. The dog or cat is recognized via a special collar tag and the door opens, which can also be controlled via an app. Anyone who feels a greater need for security can approve the entrance of the pet manually, once it has been verified by an independent cloud camera.
